The Wisconsin Uprising & Beyond

This panel discussion from the 2011 Left Forum features Bhairavi Desai, John Nichols, Austin King, Ben Manski, Monica Adams, Sarah Manski, and Elizabeth Wrigley-Field. The panelists describe the organizing and actions that occurred during the uprising and point to future plans and lessons for activists. Recorded in March 2011. Runtime 80 minutes.

Imagine A Baby

Lydia Sargent prepared this talk for a Left Forum panel/workshop on "Reimagining a Non-Sexist Society." This video is a revised version of that talk. It tells the story of an individual born in 1942 who grows up in a society where her life, and the life of those born around that time, is prescribed in excessive detail by her class, race, and gender. This situation might have continued her entire life. But just as she was to become a corporate lawyer's wife, the social revolutions of the late 1960s and early 1970s happened. We follow her trajectory from 1942 to 1969 and beyond as she experiences men in and out of the movement, learns new political skills, joins collective efforts to institute a participatory workplace, and imagines what kind of world she would like to have grown up in. Recorded in January 2011. Runtime 60 minutes.

Rebellion and Self-Organization in Algeria, Tunisia, and Egypt

This panel discussion from the 2011 Left Forum in New York City features three experts on North African liberation struggles. David Porter and Horace Campbell talk about the rich history of independence movements in Africa as context for the current wave of revolutions in North Africa and the Middle East (AKA, the Arab Spring). Nada Matta discusses Egypt in particular, focusing on the development of the coalition between students and workers which led to a General Strike and revolution. Recorded March 19, 2011. Runtime 77 minutes, plus questions and answers.
